

REINTRODUCTION 2009

Twenty-one chicks were collected from areas near Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, again under the watchful eye of Dr. Wayne Melquist (left).

Daily volunteer efforts proved invaluable for tracking birds and relieving staff.

Images provided by Janie Fink

Veterinary care with Dr. Cynthia Franklin in Yankton, South Dakota. Hooding calms osprey and other raptors for brief medical procedures.

Stephani Hilding, a staff member from Boise, helped on the project again this year.

Interns from Colorado State Katie Werner (left) and the University of Idaho Blake Linde (right), two of this year's hack site attendants.

Janie Fink and Blake Linde

Roger Dietrich, an avid local birder, mentors two budding ornithologists.

The first successful hunter brings a gar to the hack tower.